

Al Muna Drama Week

Today is the first day of drama week! The children of Al Muna are working hard to prepare the play based on the most famous children writer named Hans Andersen. The teachers and kids are working rapidly yet with very careful detail. Here some of the children are working hard to finish the backdrop for the scene:

They are trying to make the backdrop perfect to the every detail. By doing this they learned to paint effectively but quickly. So that the backdrop stands out they had to paint dark and carefully.

These children are making bracelets for the actors. They were using many colours and glitter to make it stand out. From this they learned to use perfect amounts of glitter and how to use glue properly. I think they really enjoyed this task.

These children are the main actors. They are talking about how to act the parts and express their feelings in correct manner. Later they will be practicing their parts. In this learned how to use a script better as well as how to act better. In my opinion this is the best part. Well after the bloggers.

This start to the Al Muna Drama Week was phenomenal and I'm pretty sure the children cannot wait another day to do this again because of all the fun we had while at the same time learning a skill or two.
